The Greenhouse Effect

Greenhouse gases warm the earth because they allow some incoming radiation of the sun through, but they warm air from escaping to space. Without greenhouse gases, the earth would be too cold to support life. Greenhouse gases include carbon dioxide, methane, water vapor, and other gases. The amount of greenhouse gases in the atmosphere is increasing because of human activities. This is called the greenhouse effect. The more greenhouse gases in the atmosphere, the more the earth warms. This is called global warming. Global warming is the increase in the average temperature of the earth's atmosphere and the oceans over time.

The greenhouse effect causes global warming, and it's Earth's way of keeping warm. Greenhouse gases trap heat, so they help the earth stay warm. If there are too many greenhouse gases, the earth gets too warm. This is called global warming. Global warming is the increase in the average temperature of the earth's atmosphere and the oceans over time.

Greenhouse gases are produced from industry, burning engines, and other activities. They also include methane which is released from cows.

Global warming is the increase in the average temperature of the earth's atmosphere and the oceans over time.
